

OFFSHORE TAX HEAVEN & WORLDWIDE IMMIGRATION

Citizenship by investment (“jus pecuniae”, CIP) and Residence by Investment Programme (“golden visas”, RIP) have seen big growths in recent years. Jus pecuniae means acquiring citizenship against financial contribution. But citizenship for many immigrants, comes at a significant financial cost. Investment based citizenship/residency programmes may or may not require the applicant to reside in the country prior to naturalization. There are mainly two routes, that lead to citizenship under investment option, one through naturalizing with residency and other without residency leading to direct citizenship with a passport. The number of countries offering such schemes based on economic investment have increased, fueling global demand for passports and visas.

Citizenship by investment programs (CIP) gets you fast track citizenship within months, waiving naturalisation requirements such as residency, military service, language requirement etc. This is one of the main reasons why citizenship by investment programmes are so popular and also less time consuming. The citizenship given is lifetime can be passed on to future family generations through children.

Residency by investment programs (RIP), grant citizenship through residency usually takes years of uninterrupted living to naturalise for citizenship. You must also fully integrate to culture, language etc. You may undergo military service to naturalise for citizenship in some countries. In most countries, if you don't live in the country enough (absent for more than 3 months), you won't even qualify for Citizenship or Green card. The processing time of citizenship applications through naturalisation may take many months or more than a year. It is worth pointing out that some countries like United Kingdom require a PR status before applying for citizenship. Golden visas are issued with limited time validity (say one or two years). You have to go extend the validity of residence permit (under golden visa) once every year or two years and to do this you must visit the country personally.

There are several quick investment routes to buy citizenship through investment. The best, easiest, less expensive and fastest option is one time donation payment to Government fund. You will get your money back if the citizenship is refused. You can also invest in real estate (must hold for 5 years) and get a citizenship, but it is an expensive route to citizenship. Under real estate, you are required to pay various property taxes, fees at end it will end up more than you bargained for. Another interesting option is buying Government bonds ($500,000 onwards), you will get your full money refunded back after 5 years (guaranteed by Government) with no interest. You keep your citizenship for life time. You will not lose your citizenship after getting back your money from bonds. A handful of countries grant residency or even citizenship against capital investments in Art & culture projects, Research and technology sector, Green energy sectors and foundations or organisations serving public interest.

A dual citizen is a citizen of more than one country at the same time. Most of the developed nations the world, freely allow their citizens to hold dual/multiple citizenships, yet you have to be careful that law in some countries provides for the automatic termination of its citizenship, if you acquire foreign citizenship. Some countries require a compulsory military service. Your citizenship by birth, marriage or naturalisation, may have a different effect on your dual-citizenship status. Dual citizenship usually allowed for children until they reach 18 years, by many countries, after which they are given a choice of one citizenship. Some countries like Germany allow dual citizenship by birth, but forbid dual citizenship, when you naturalise.

Before going through detailed list, here are are quick summary of countries that do not allow dual citizenship. All other countries are liberal in accepting dual citizenship status.

We like the banks here better than the companies. Incomplete news stories lead lay people to believe that Switzerland isn't the banking center it used to be. Not necessarily so. They just won't let people use their country for tax evasion anymore. Otherwise, the banking system is very strong. Company formation, however is quite expensive without corresponding significant benefits for holding liquid investments. You will need about half a million dollars or more to open a bank account here also need lots of paper work.
